THE MARK

ILLUMINATION AND THE IMBIBING OF KNOWLEDGE

Cambridge has for centuries been a world-famous centre of learning and ‘University Arms’ as a name was first used in 1834 for the coaching house on Regent Street and referenced the Cambridge University Coat of Arms.

Inspired by both the academic history of Cambridge and its glorious architecture, a stay at University Arms promises to leave each guest better illuminated and imbibed with new knowledge. From Sir Isaac Newton’s contributions to mathematics and physics, to Charles Darwin’s theory of evolution, to Crick, Watson and Franklin’s discovery of DNA and to Stephen Hawking’s most recent speculations about time and space, Cambridge has long been at the forefront of progress in human knowledge and the beauty of its architecture has inspired students for generations.

Parker’s Tavern, afternoon tea in the Library, and cocktails in the Bar all draw inspiration from the rich heritage of the hotel and the University of Cambridge. Signature creations such as the “Blushing Byron” and “The 1863” pay tribute to the city’s illustrious past, while afternoon tea offers a charming journey through Cambridge’s history.
